

BiomX Provides Update on Defense Technology Portfolio and Growth Strategy

June 18, 2026

Presentation reflects BiomX's completed strategic transition and current focus on technologies that identify, analyze, and respond to physical threats

NETANYA, Israel, June 18, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- BiomX Inc. (NYSE American: PHGE), a company that develops and acquires technologies for defense, security, and first-response markets, today announced that it has posted an updated informational presentation to the Company's website as part of its completed strategic transition towards the defense sector. The presentation provides an overview of BiomX's portfolio, operating framework, leadership and advisory team, and growth strategy.

BiomX's current strategy is built around the growing need for technologies that can identify, analyze, and support faster responses to physical threats across high-consequence settings. The Company's portfolio currently includes Zorronet, an AI-powered Autonomous Command Center platform, and DFSL, which develops laser-based threat detection and physical security technologies.

"Our new presentation is intended to give stockholders and investors a clear view of BiomX as it exists today, and a sense of how we are working to build the Company from here," said Michael Oster, Chief Executive Officer of BiomX. "Over the past several months, we have completed a fundamental strategic transition and rebuilt the Company around defense, security, and critical-infrastructure technologies. Our focus now is on building a portfolio that helps identify, analyze, and respond to physical threats more quickly, particularly as UAVs and autonomous systems create new challenges for governments, infrastructure operators, and security teams. We are also focused on implementing our NYSE American compliance plan while building a stronger financial and operating foundation for the Company over time. We have real technology in the field, a clear operating framework, and a leadership and advisory team focused on disciplined execution."

The updated presentation also highlights BiomX's leadership and advisory team, which includes experience across defense technology, public markets, operational security, electro-optics, and large-scale security systems. BiomX believes this experience supports the Company's ability to evaluate, acquire, and advance technologies that address evolving physical security needs.
